

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

erature, that our author has disturbed us by his unguardedness and hardihood. Few scholars know, better than he, that, long before the era of Lorenzo, the name of the buffalo was settled in the vulgar language and rustic proverbs of Italy; before then, as now, the violent in the hands of the cunning were "led by the nose like the buffalo"; before that time buffalo-races (bufolate) had amused the populace of Florence; nor can we doubt, that these animals (which, and not the good old Georgic breed of beeves, — as we love to suppose, — must have furnished the Catholic legends with their images of incarnate demons,) for eight full centuries, had, in pairs, sullenly borne the Italian yoke, and, in dusky herds, had "lowered" over the Maremma.

NOTE

TO ARTICLE IV. OF THE LAST NUMBER.

Our readers may remember, that, in the last Number, we briefly indicated some remarkable thefts from our pages, on the part of the English "Monthly Review." We closed our article with a passage from that journal, condemning all such piratical doings, as those of which we had convicted it. We have since been amused to observe, what we had then overlooked, that that very passage was taken by the "Monthly Reviewers" from one of our old volumes. Let the reader compare page 133 of the forty-fourth volume of this work.